Shortly after noon the anchor was boisted, and the ship started on the mensured mile. She had not, however, been under way more than eight minutes when the explosion took place. In a minute or two the officers. and men on board were enveloped in steam and smoke, and it was impossible to go below to nacertain the cause of the disaster. By order of Captain Waddilove a signal was run up for assistance, and it was at once observed in the harbour. Working parties were told off from the Duke of Wellington, and despatched to Spithead with a number of naval surgeons. Meanwhile, the smoke and steam were beginning to disappear, thus enabling those on board to descend to the engine department, but it was nearly an hour before the stoke-bole could be thoroughly explored. It was then found that the whole of the front of the starboard foremost boiler in the after stoke-hole had been blown out with such force as to carry away everything it struck. Many of the unfortunate men were dreadfully mutilated, and some had their clothes torn to shreds. Mr. Winfield's bend was found at some distance from his body. The stoke-hole, when afterwards viewed, presented a scene of utter wreck and desolation. About 12ft. by 4ft. of the front of the forward beiler on the starboard side of the after stoke hale had been blown out, and formed a kind of platform in front of the boiler. The truth is that nothing can be more utterly irrational than rejecting the Divide authority of the Church. It is not by any process of the pure reasoning that any man in the whole world rejects the Church; it is through fragmentary or partial observation, through want of scrutiny between principles and accidents, through confusing Divine law with human nature, and through want of philosoobject thought. These are the mental derange. ments. THE DEPRECIATION OF SILVER. The Economist says that the report of the Ohina Fire Insurance Company's Shares $150 lommons Committeel on the depreciation of silver is a very able document. It appears to have been drawn up by the chairman, Mr Goschen, and accepted, with comparatively minor amendments, by the Committee, and it has the dearness, the precision, and the great information, no matter at what labour acquired for which Mr. Goschen's writings on such subjects are remarkable. From full information we see the nature of the evil from which we are suffering. What we are suffering from is the apprehension of increased production of silver Chinese Imperial Loan-£95. suddenly supervening on a market previously perturbed, upon which one Government had forced an extra supply, from which a union of other Governments had refused to take, as usual any supply, and in which another Government, by an increase of the tribute. it requires from a silver-importing country, has temporarily, if not permanently, lessened the demand. This explanation of the real malady. at once disposes of a crowd of unreal remedies. No competent person can propose a demonetization of silver in India, and a substitution of gold for it, just at a moment when the price of silver has been thrust down by so strong an appraheasion caused by such peculiar circumstances Again, no one would propose to arrest coining silver in the East as a remedy for such a state of things, for this would only disorder the silver mark tatill further. It would add a new political difficulty to those previous political difficulties which have caused so much disturbance, and so make the existing confusion far worse than before. Nor can it be maintained. that the Indian Government should now require the ryot, whose rent has been formerly fixed in silver, to pay either in gold itself, or in so much more silver as would purchase the same quantity of gold as that fixed rent would have purchased when the settlement was made. The real remedy is to leave the great natural forces of trade to operate unrestricted. The true remedy ·for an enfecbled market is an access of demand. and in this case the laws of commerce, if not suspended or orippled by State interference. will produce that demand.

THE INDIAN WAR IN THE UNITED

The detailed accounts of the defeat of General Custer's force in the attack upon the Sioux add | and Offices lately occupied by Messrs. A. His temerity resulted not only in the total destruction of his own detachment of cavalry, but very nearly proved fatal to Major Reno's command. Custer reached the Indian Settlement. village on Rosebud Creek, near which Crock had been allecked on the 17th of June, on the an Eight-roomed Dwelling House, detached, morning of Sunday, June 25th, with eight com. with Garden all round, Offices, Godowns, Serpanies of cavalry. Moving forward himself vants' Quarters, and Onthouses. Area 1,064 with five companies to attack one end of the Tsubos of 36 square feet. village, he left Major Reno with three to attack the other. It was no doubt injudicious to divide so small a force wearied with an exceptionally long march in the presence of such a strong hody of Sioux; but General Custer had with him the linest regiment of frontier cavalry in the United States service, and against any other tribe than the Sioux he might have been justified in running the risk. The two detachments thus separated never met again, nor was Mejor Reno aware of the fate which had befallen bis known as Messrs. A. HEARD & Co.'s, consisting comrade until he himself had been relieved by of Offices. Dwelling House, One Two-storied General Terry two days afterwards, on the 27th | Stone Godown, Two Tea-firing Godowns (One of June. From the position in which the dead Wooden), &c. bodies were found, however, it was manifest that Area about General Custer had tried to ford the river and attack the village on the opposite bank; had then been driven back by the Indians and compelled to maintain a running fight until not a man was left to continue the struggle. He was cut off from Major Reno at the very commencement of the battle, and was of course never able to reestablish his communication. Major Reno, on his side, very narrowly escaped the same fate. He, too, attempted to cross the stream and perform bie part in the attack on the Sioux illage; but he also was repulsed, and at the Min, lately known as Messrs. A. HEARD & the best principle hitherto attained. The typofirst endeavoured to shelter himself on the Co.'s, consisting of Dwelling House, Offices, right bank. Finding this position inscoure, extensive Godowns, Lea-packing Sheds, &c. he again crossed, and with great difficulty succeeded in fighting his way-to-a-bluff-on the left bank, where he insintained himself, having been reinforced by three more companies, notif the evening of the 26th. He was then rescued by General Terry, who had come up by forced marches, but not before he had suffered very severely. It is stated that "Old Sitting Bull" and his Sionz, combined with a body of Arrapaboes and Cheyennes, have now abandoned their encampment, and some time may elapse before anything is hourd of their whereabouts. The slaughter of so many Americans and the wounding of so many more by a desperate foe has roused a cry for vengeance even from those who previously defended the action of the Indiane. A war of extermination will, therefore, be at once begun. There our belittle doubt, however, that there are many Americans who will regret that the final struggle with the Indians should have been provoked by Du Pont's Blasting and Sporting Powder; Lake many as any other Dictionary hitherto pub. A PLEASANT NOTION. A Paris paper furnishes the following advertisement in English :- "Madame X. X permits herself to eny that she has the skin white to pearls, full health, the cheek of roses, face of sweet expression, blue eyes and black hair, and a coquette; therefore full of health. She will be vaccinated next Tuesday, and in as short a time as possible the lymyh-of her arm-will-be-ready-for the vaccination of anyone desiring to possess purely healthful vaccination. For terms apply, &c." This originates an entirely new idea with an alluring perspective. Not only does it open a new industry to beautiful but down-trodden woman, but it will prove a great consolation to unrequited love. If the despairing lover cannot become bone of the hone and flesh of the flesh of his Dulcines, there is no reason, if this beautiful theory be carried out, why, at least, the virus of the beloved spirit-cannot thrill the pulses of change and contrast; and people who could her adorer and his heart be filled with the substance as well as the image of the fair innoculator. The most unsuccessful swain could then bave the lymph of his nymph, however hadly he fared otherwise.

DREARINESS.

There is an immense amount of simple simplicity than for elegance. It is to bedreariness in England-dreariness that is not called the "Emancipated Costume," and is misfortune, not active suffering, but that is the invention of Mrs. Gearing, who got the simply the effect of absence, negation. Another peculiar habit is that of the activity of regret, sinks down into the wearing leather bolsters, made tapering from dreary emptiness of monotony; and the long coutre to end like buffaloes horns, round strip of embroidery which made a flounce for | the waist. Sometimes a dandy lady will wear a petticost to be worn only on fine Sundays | two or three of these peculiar vestments, at church, is no sooner finished then another though it cannot be for decency, as the long strip is begun to trim nightgowns which barest requisites of what is considered inwill never be worn at all. If needlework is dispensable with most people, are scarcely not a charm, and reading is, how are books complied with. Some wear, instead of these to be had in this far-away country place, bustles, belts split in the rear into two or which no railroad enlivers, no market sup. three parts, where they sorve to keep up a plies, for which even the days of carriers are small piece of leather about twelve inches by the thirst for knowledge and the dreariness were so nty in quantity, she was very dressy of the days may be assuaged at the same in her get up, her apron being ornamented events, they can bestly themselves move than vory effective appearance, and seemed fully

But it is not only in the country that people suffer from the dreamness of life. That can happen as well in a town, and all the more intensely. Then there will be superadded the feeling that made the punishment of Tantalus severe of being within sight and sound of the desired without the power of anjoyment. Streaming through the atreets ( are countless multitudes of people, some of whom might turn this degert of present existence into a tair and smiling garden if only the airy barriers of conventional separation were with Irawn, and bearts left free to make their own world happy; for life is dreary for the want of interest m ve than for the want of amusement—for the want of an absorbing occupation; and the best interest that we can take is in each other, and the best occupation that which does good to our kind. Give the dreary-living woman a child to educate, a sick sister to nurse, a good man to love, or even some work to do that has a tangible and purposeful end in view, and where is her gloom then? It has gone. It went when her affections found a rooting place and her activities. an outlet. Fir of this we may be very sure, that occupation which take: the mind out of itself banishes dreariness from the heart, and that a great and absorbing love has the same power. But, we must confess it with shame, human nature does not live at high pressure for long, and the love which in its early days made earth a heaven, and filled the life so full of joy as to make it independent of outside circumstances, after a time sinks down to the level of ordinary existence; and, though part of the very heart of life, is not the whole of its need. Hence even lovers of the most passionate kind, set down to fulfil their existence in a dreary country place, surrounded only by dreary circumstances, find that love and marriage lose something of their exquisite savour for the want of not live apart too often come to the knowledge that they do not care to live together with no one but each other. -Queen.
